

My concern about Broadband over traditional copper telephone lines is the potential for RF radiation which can cause interference to other licensed services (i.e., amateur radio). Regulatory protections should be in place to prevent such interference and/or to require telephone companies to take immediate corrective action.